We make a video: 'Am I pro or against corruption?'

SOME SUGGESTED QUESTIONS

1. What is corruption for you?
2. When people talk about corruption, they can think of the political world. Have you already voted? Are you planning to vote in the next elections? Why? Which are the factors that will eventually influence your electoral choices?
3. Do you know any cases of corruption in your country or region?
4. If you know about some corruption cases, how did you learn about them? Have you ever had any direct experience of some form – even disguised – of corruption? Can you classify some experience as corruption only now, retrospectively, which you did not recognize as such at the time? Can you describe it? How did you react?
5. What about other practices (e.g. patronage, favouritism) in which a private interest is put above the pursuit of the public interests?
6. Are there some cases in which you believe it is acceptable for a public authority to favour a private interest (including a private need)? Which ones?
7. In your opinion, what is the public interest? I.e. in which way is everyone's interest served? Do you think your friends and family would always agree with you?
8. Who are the people (or institutions) who have power over you in your daily life? Your professors? The police? Politicians? Religious authorities? Family members? Others? Who do you trust among them? And why? Who do you not trust? And why?

9. Have you ever held positions of responsibility for a collective/association/party/other? If so, how did you make decisions concerning others? How did you manage to gain the trust of the people you represented/managed/organised?
10. Do you know any association working against corruption?
11. Why do you think it is still necessary to ask ourselves this question?
12. What do you think about whistleblowers? (Give an example of a whistleblower in the country)
13. What do you think about people who report/accuse their colleagues of risk of corruption or opacity?
